REPORT OF DR. DWIGHT.

YALE'S RETIRING PRESIDENT'S FINAL OFFICIAL UTTERANCE.

-Haven, Conn., June 23 (Special).-The annual report of President Dwight of Yale has just been issued. It covers not only the year ending December 31, 1898, but also, in a supplementary report, the months from January to June of the present year are treated. As the document em-bodies some positive opinions on Yale life and customs-the curriculum, the elective system, the lecture method of instruction and written examinations—the report is sure to attract wide at-tention. Many educators will regard some of President Dwight's positions as reactionary, but they are none the less noteworthy as the final opinion of one who is completing his thirtieth year as president of Yale. President Dwight praises two other retiring offi-cers of the university-Professor Franklin B. Dex-ter, secretary of the corporation, whose knowledge of Yale life and history is well known, and William W. Farmen, the treasurer, who in a period of rapidly Bling interest rates has so managed the funds of the university as to derive from them an average revenue of more than 5 per cent.

Commenting on the great increase in number, beauty and comfort of the new dormitories, the president approves of them as an educational inence, and scouts the idea that their greater elegance will endanger or diminish the democratic spirit of the institution. "This spirit has never had its vitality dependent on the fact that every student was spending the same amount of money as was or could be expended by every other. The Yale democratic spirit is no such weak, worthless, impracticable thing as this. The true and genuine democratic spirit . . . is the spirit which esti-mates a man according to what he is, and not according to what he has," the report says. "This does not demand that the man who has possessions should not make use of them for his own comfort and culture and refinement, beyond that which is possible for the man who has them not."

DEFENCE OF FOUR YEARS' COURSE.

On the elective system in the academical department the president commends the tendency of juniors and seniors to elect courses in history, English literature and political science. Continuing, he says: "If we are to have an education of a general and well-rounded character, as preparatory to a more special one fitting for professional life, we may well retain the four years' college curricu . we may fitly arrange it in its suc cessive stages in such a way as best to accomplish the end in view. There can be no doubt that the tendency to specializing in our educational system. m the beginning of the studies of youth as contrasted with childhood, has become excessive, and that if the best education is to continue this tendency must be counteracted. Otherwise we may have educated lawyers or physicians or specialists of one sort or another, but not edu diege debating are especially interesting. He attributes its decline to a change in the spirit of the age and the adoption by mature men of an earlier generation of calm and unemotional methods, rather an the use of rhetoric and rhetorical display. Its revival is a result of new contations, and as such "may have peculiar value. The power which prac-tice in public discussion gives is one of importance to the educated man." He recommends that special provision be made in the new buildings for rooms for dobating purposes, and that the students have special guidance. On intercollegiate contests he does not look with so much favor, and asks: "Is not the interest of the present time too much the interest in securing a prize or a victory?"

On the subject of discipline and influence President Dwight's remarks are especially interesting: The call of the present and the coming time upor our professors and teachers is an impressive and hatic call to enter into as close relations as possible with the individual students who are under heir personal instruction. No professor or fulfils his duty to his pupils who sees them only in the lecture room, $. . If he can infuse his thought and character into the life of the individual student he will, at the end, have accomplished an additional and even a greater work. He commends the disciplinary value of research work and the practice of selecting professors and instructors largely because of their aptitude and attainments as original investigators, but at the same time he alleges that this tendency is attended by dangers and evils, as related to the best educaby dangers and evils, as related to the best educa-tion. Such men—who have no duties in the way of instruction and do not meet students at lectures— may be of great service to the institution and add to its fame, but no faculty "composed entirely of such men could fulfil its duties to its students or to the Commonwealth. The true educa-tion of its students has not been and cannot be se-cured without the work and influence of men gifted as teachers."

VALUE OF ORAL EXERCISES.

VALUE OF ORAL EXERCISES.

He criticised the eclectic system distinctively, especially as the instruction is given by lectures instead of by recitations, and this method compels the teacher to test his students by written rather than oral examinations. "As a result of this necessity, the student becomes less of an individual personality to his apprehension, or, at least, there is less of immediate communication between the mind of the student and the mind of the teacher hears and corrects and suggests in his presence." He maintains that written examinations have not proved themselves in experience to be what has been claimed for them. The element of personality is lacking in marking the papers, they are frequently attended by the cramming process. Involving as the system does the publication of the papers of each year, it results that they are constantly made more difficult, minute, special—in a word, more puzzling to the student. "Examinations... have rarely, if ever, any force within them for the arousing of enthusiasm." He believes that "personal investigations" of the students attainments by the instructor will help to arouse enthusiasm and may serve equally well as tests of knowledge.

A notable gift to the university has just been announced. On June 19 Frofessor Charles Emerson Beecher, who succeeds the late Professor Marsh, gave his entire scientific collections to the Peabody Museum. They were made previous to his coming to Yale, and represent the results of twenty years of labor. They comprise upward of one hundred thousand specimens, mostly of invertebrate fossits. This collection, added to that of Professor Marsh, makes the Peabody Museum one of the richest in the country. Besides these gifts, the university has in the last eighteen months received more than 1860,000 in money, of which 1420,000 has been secured toward the bi-centennial fund. During 188 the library was increased by 10,800 volumes and 7,800 pamphlets, of which 9,520 volumes were purchases.

Of his successor President Dwight said: "Profe

Of his successor President Dwight said: "Pro feasor Hadley will begin his new work at a most auspicious time in the history of the university—a time when all the inspirations of the past and the future seem to unite together for his encourage have yet been realized may well bring him with an ever-continuing energy and confident hope." He dwells on the point that the future development of Yale is to be "as a university and not simply as a college."

The personal references of his farewell words were as follows:

The present president, the fifth in the succession, ventures to hope that the friends of Yale, in their review of these last thirteen years, may feel that he has wrought not unworthily of those who preceded him. There could be for him, certainly, no happier fortune than to be assured that his work has, in some true sense and measure, fitly completed—for the hundred years—that which was begun so grandly by his ancestor. It will always be a pleasant thought to him—if he may have this assurance—that the beginning and the ending were, by the favor of God, given to the two men, of the same family and bearing the same name, as their allotment of working in and for the college and university.

With words of grateful recognition of the kindthese manifested toward him by the members of the corporation and the other officers of the university, and of the friendship of the graduates to which they have given most generous testimony, the president closes this last report of the years of his administration. As he leaves his office his desire and prayer are that the divine blessing may ever rest upon this home of learning, which was consecrated by the fathers of the Christian faith.

CLERGYMAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

TURNED ON THE GAS IN HIS EMPTY HOUSE-

FOUND BY A POLICEMAN. young wife of the Rev. Dr. Daniel Morrelle an Episcopalian clergyman, seventy years old, left their home, at No. 228 West End-ave., on Tuesday. The clergyman had the furniture of the entire house removed Monday. He slept in the house on a bare floor on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, and he then became despondent and turned on every one of six gas jets of the chandelier in the front room of the first story while he lay down on the floor to die. He was found in an unconscious condition yesterday morning and removed to Policeman Bloss, of the West Sixty-eighth-st. station, was passing the house, and smelled gas, which he thought came from the house. He could not door, and this he did. He made his way upstairs and found that the Rev. Dr. Morrelle was lying on the floor. Bloss turned off the gas and then dragged the man as near the window as possible, opening the window. He got another policeman to send for an ambulance, which soon arrived from Soosevelt Hospital, and the unconscious clergyman was taken away. His condition is serious.

Mrs. Mary O'Connell, caretaker of the house at No. 232, said that Dr. Morrelle and his wife went to live in the house six months ago. Dr. Morrelle had no pastorate. Mrs. O'Connell said that Dr.
Morrelle had all the furniture removed from the house on Monday. It had been bought from a furniture dealer, who was the man that took it away. Dr. Morrelle continued to live in the house,

DR. FREDERICK A. COOK HOME.

HE SAYS THE ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION OF WHICH HE WAS CHIEF SURGEON WAS A SUCCESS.

Among the passengers on the Lamport & Holt steamship Buffon, which arrived here from Rio Janeiro yesterday, was Dr. Frederick A. Cook, of Brooklyn, who was surgeon-in-chief and anthro-pologist of the scientific expedition to the Antarctic Ocean, which sailed from Antwerp in the steam ship Beigica, under command of Captain Audrian de Gerlache, in August, 1897. After the vessel's stores were replenished at the Falkland Islands she started on a southerly course on January 1.

"We entered Palmer Land," said Dr. Cook yeserday, in describing the voyage, "through Hughes Gulf, which we found was not a gulf, but a strait s long as Magellan and somewhat wider. We spent about two weeks surveying Hughes Gulf, and finally emerged into the Pacific and proceeded along the west border or coast of Graham's Land until we entered the main body of pack ice west of Alexander. We passed through the pack ice about ninety miles south until we were frozen in. thus frozen in the pack ice, remained fast ninety miles south until we were frozen in. The vessel, thus frozen in the pack ice, remained fast for thirteen months, during which we drifted two thousand miles to and fro. and finally emerged into clear water at 103 west longitude."

As soon as the Belgica was released from the ice she returned to Punta Arenas, where Dr. Cook left her. The vessel proceeded to Rio Janeiro, whence she will return to Antwerp.

Dr. Cook brought back many interesting curios, such as sledges, skins and stones, but will make no report of his observations to any society in addition to what he sent by cable. He says that the expedition was a success. Its object was to make magnetic, zoological, meteorological and general oceanographic observations. The furthest south if went was latitude 71.36, when it was in longitude 92. It crossed Palmer Land, going for many miles over that country, which had been touched, but never penetrated before.

"We made a map of our travels on this island, and the bird and animal life we saw there was most interesting." Dr. Cook said.

"I shall have something to say later on the subject of the land we crossed, and the magnetic conditions we encountered."

The Belgica expedition was organized in part by the Belgian Government and in part by private subscription. The vessel was originally built for polar whaling. She carried an immerse captive balloon, which was used in surveying the sea at big distances.

One of the principal objects of the expedition, acballoon, which was used in surveying the sea big distances.

One of the principal objects of the expedition, according to the original pian, was to take observations for the exact determination of the south magnetic pole. It was intended that from Melbourne the Belgica should go to the Antarctic land of South Victoria, on which are the volcances Erebus and Terror. It was from this region that Captain Gerlache was to begin his observations for the pole.
